AHMI Members Revisit High Point Market

Appalachian Hardwood Manufacturers’ members returned to the High Point Furniture Market to call on new and existing customers.

It has been six years since AHMI held its Fall Meeting at the world’s largest furniture exhibition. More than 1,200 manufacturers from 200 countries and upwards of 50,000 people participate in the twice annual show.

AHMI scheduled meetings and tours for members during the “Supplier Day” and concentrated on domestic manufacturers. Staff provided members with a list of more than 300 international exhibitors for meetings and the group participated in the 2018 International Society of Furniture Designers Pinnacle Awards reception.

The participants toured the SpectreWood Furniture, Country View Furniture, Vaughan-Bassett Furniture, Bernhardt and Gat Creek Furniture showrooms as a group. The manufacturers produce solid hardwood bedroom, dining and entertainment centers from Appalachian Cherry, Maple and Oak as well as American Walnut.

The report from exhibitors was continued emphasis on solid wood as consumers want it. (See Furniture Market on page 3)

Appalachian Species Win Furniture Design Awards

Furniture designs made of Appalachian Hardwoods won international acclaim recently at the High Point Furniture Market.

The International Society of Furniture Designers held their 23rd Annual Pinnacle Awards Competition and drew interest from designers across the country in 18 categories. Three Appalachian Hardwood Manufacturers, Inc. member companies and Appalachian species were recognized with top awards.

The winners included:

- The Sunbury Bed by designer Michael Showalter for Gat Creek made of Appalachian Cherry. The Sunbury Bed is made from local and sustainably harvested solid Appalachian hardwood.

- The Local Harvest Casual Dining by designer Catina Roscoe for Borkholder Furniture made of Red Oak won the Casual Dining category. Roscoe, who spoke at the 2018 AHMI Annual Meeting, said Local Harvest is built in solid Red Oak and appeals to consumers’ growing preference for organic, natural and handcrafted products.

The way I see it...

By Tom Inman, AHMI President

...AHMI Export members who have maintained business in China are working diligently AGAIN to make deadlines to ship before proposed changes in the tariff on hardwood lumber and logs.

It’s the second time in three months that the threat of an increase in a tariff has salespeople trying to determine pricing of lumber. In July, Chinese officials announce retaliatory tariffs against US products after tariffs were placed on Chinese goods. The initial proposals were 25% but these were reduced to 5% and 10% when they took effect Sept. 24.

Now the Chinese government is threatening to increase the tariff on hardwood logs and lumber to 25% as soon as Jan. 1, 2019. Exporters are scrambling to get shipments out in early November so they will be on the ground in China before the deadline.

Freight forwarders are creatively making it happen, according to AHMI members TMX and Laufer Group. It is challenging.

AND more AHMI Producers and Distributors are looking for new customers in the U.S. and other countries. There are new inquiries coming to AHMI from furniture and flooring manufacturers, the pallet industry continues to expand, road and crane mats are increasing and there are new plants opening in Vietnam, Indonesia and India.

The U.S. hardwood industry has benefited from the tremendous growth in China over the past 10 years. The market there like our Red Oak and other species and the manufacturers understand our consistent product.

The politics of 2018, however, have hurt the markets. It has caused every company to reconsider business plans and marketing strategies.

While difficult in the short term, these reconsiderations can have positive effects in the long term. Companies should review their strategies and revise with new market conditions.

"Change is the law of life and those who look only to the past or present are certain to miss the future.” —President John F. Kennedy

- The first Maker / Designer Award winner was Escape Velocity by Owain Harris. The category was sponsored by AHMI and the piece was built from walnut solids and eucalyptus veneers.
- The Hague Dining Table by Thor Tober for Century Furniture won the Formal Dining award. It is made of White Oak solids and veneers.
- The Dominic Metal Canopy Bed by Bernhardt Casegoods Design Team for Bernhardt won the bedroom award.
- The Linea Collection by Otto & Moore Design and Bernhardt Design Team for Bernhardt won the Major Collection category.

"We see an ever-expanding awareness of the impact of product design on the marketplace," said John Conrad, ISFD executive director. "We are also pleased to see intense competition in our newest category, Maker/Designer sponsored by AHMI, created to recognize the builders/makers who create one-of-a-kind pieces for sale in galleries and stores, as well as client-specific products.”

AHMI Chairman Lowery Anderson presented the Maker / Designer Award and remarked that it was pleasing to see the number of winning pieces in solid hardwood. More than a dozen AHMI members attended the awards ceremony.

The High Point Market attendance was down slightly as exhibitors and manufacturers battled Hurricane Michael on the opening days. High Point Market is the largest furnishings industry trade show in the world, bringing more than 75,000 people to High Point, NC, every six months.

Gat Caperton of Gat Creek said the response from retailers to the sustainability message is strong. His company makes product under their own name and private labels for retailers. The cherry, maple and ash products were well-received.

Vaughan-Bassett Furniture recently began a licensing program with Ben and Erin Napier of the HGTV’s “Home Town.” The bedroom and dining room collections are designed by the duo and made of Appalachian Hard and Soft Maple.

“As fans already know, Ben designs and builds his own furniture in his woodshop and Erin is an acclaimed designer. Together, they have already restored and transformed dozens of homes in Laurel and we cannot wait for Ben and Erin to bring their design ideas and expertise to Vaughan-Bassett,” Wyatt Bassett said.

Ben Napier said they are excited to work with VB. “Our designs will be lovingly made with American craftsmanship, American quality and by the largest manufacturer of wooden residential furniture in the United States,” he said.

VB maintains its Appalachian Hardwood Collections in Cherry, Maple and Oak.

A third stop was SpectreWood of State College, PA, and attendees viewed solid cherry and walnut bedroom, entertainment and office furnishings. Eric Freiberg explained the products and noted that market acceptance was good.

AHMI members then participated in individual meetings with manufacturers from the U.S., Mexico, China, Italy and Canada.

AHMI also presented a program titled “Appalachian Hardwoods In Sustainable Design” for furniture designers and manufacturers. The session detailed the hardwood species from the Appalachian region and their application for furniture.

The Certified Appalachian Hardwood Legal and Sustainable program was explained and members of the Sustainable Furnishings Council were recognized. Certified Appalachian meets the requirements of SFC’s Wood Scorecard program.

The High Point Market is the largest furnishings industry trade show in the world, bringing more than 75,000 people to High Point, NC, every six months. The next market is scheduled for April 6-10, 2019.

Tariffs, Demand Are Talk Of NHLA Convention

The toll that Chinese tariffs have taken on the hardwood lumber industry was the center of most conversations at the National Hardwood Lumber Association Convention in Toronto recently.

While the percentages for tariffs on lumber and logs are both lower than what was threatened, it has forced declines in sales and values, many people report. During the American Hardwood Export Council session, staff gave updates on changes in demand in China and the potential in new markets in other countries.

NHLA elected new officers for 2018-19 and are: Darwin Murray of McClain Forest Products in West Plains, MO, president; and Jeff Wirkkala of Hardwood Industries, Inc. in Sherwood, OR, vice president.

There was a great crowd at the convention and the mood was mixed. There is concern about lumber availability in the fourth quarter and demand for products.
Senate Hearing Favors Mass Timbers' Future

By Dana Lee Cole
Hardwood Federation Executive Director

On Oct. 23, the Environmental and Energy Study Institute (EESI) held a briefing on the Hill titled “Wood: The Building Material of the Future?” EESI was founded in 1984 by a bipartisan group of lawmakers to inform the debate on energy and environmental policy at the federal level. Your Hardwood Federation team attended the packed committee hearing.

Sen. Angus King (I-ME) kicked off the briefing via video conference in which he extolled the virtues of cross laminated timber and other innovative wood products as being a promising market driver for timber in states like Maine that are heavily forested. He is a Timber Innovation Act cosponsor and co-chairs the Working Forests Caucus in the Senate with Sen. Jim Risch (R-ID).

Melissa Jenkins, who is the mass timber portfolio team leader at the U.S. Forest Service, said the Forest Service is excited about the market-creating potential of mass timber as a way to address the nation’s overstocked forests. She noted that CLT production is expanding in the U.S. with new facilities coming on line from Montana to Maine.

Craig Rawlings from the Forest Business Network was next and he highlighted a number of project examples, including the hardwood CLT display in Columbus, IN. Rawlings noted that the movement toward mass timber is the most exciting development in his 40-year career. The simple fact that smaller diameter trees can be used to make panels creates benefits for forest health and for management for low grade timber.

Architect Susan Jones emphasized that architects are increasingly interested in mass timber as its lower carbon footprint. A mid-rise project is 15-20 percent less carbon intensive than a traditionally-built steal or concrete structure. In addition to its carbon sequestering benefits, the aesthetic that these buildings create is superior.

Jones said the priority for architects is for the commercial building codes to accept CLT and other mass timber products and that process is occurring now. In fact, the International Codes Council is considering changes this Fall to its codes to accommodate mass timber.

Finally, Jeff Morrow concluded the session with a perspective from the construction manager standpoint. Morrow’s firm, LendLease, favors mass timber for sites where soil conditions are poor and labor costs are high. CLT is versatile and lighter than traditional commercial construction materials and generally easier to work with at the construction site.

The bottom line is that this briefing was helpful in our continuing education efforts with Capitol Hill staff about the attributes and benefits of this promising new wood product application that has the potential to help virtually all aspects of the forest products value chain.

Building Code Changes Get Positive Comments

The Mass Timber Code Coalition (MTCC) reports a positive reception for mass timber during the Public Comment Hearings portion of this year’s International Code Council Annual Conference in Richmond. All of the proposals from the Ad Hoc Committee on Tall Wood Buildings were approved by large margins at the hearings.

These changes go to the online government consensus vote for final approval. Talk of mass timber’s safety, cost and energy efficiency, sustainability, and wide applicability have had a profound impact.

The ICC recognized that with taller mass timber structures being approved more often, it was time to ensure that the IBC was providing building code officials with the tools they need to carefully evaluate proposed mass timber buildings. The ICC process is based on the best available science and a careful, deliberative process.
AHMI, HMA and NHLA will host the 2019 Hardwood Leadership Development Retreat for professional leadership training Jan. 28-30 in Greensboro, NC.

The symposium is designed to help individuals maximize their potential and instill the values and behaviors that create a strong culture of leadership.

The program addresses the complexities of leadership and will:
* Focus and develop leadership for the new and seasoned employees.
* Offer forums and networking opportunities to help companies stay relevant.

Fly-In 2018 Is Successful

The annual Hardwood Federation Fly-In to Washington DC was Sept. 11-13 and 83 industry leaders covered the Hill in small groups and made more than 120 visits.

There were also meetings with U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue, senior staff and advisors at the Department of Commerce, and the Chief Economist to Vice President Mike Pence. It was a busy and productive day for participants.

A chief concern was the ongoing U.S. trade dispute with China and the resulting tariffs on both Chinese imports and U.S. exports. Trade is having a devastating impact on hardwood sawmills and HF asked that the Trump Administration return to the negotiating table as soon as possible.

Reauthorization of the Farm Bill was our second priority issue, particularly important was our support of full funding for the Market Access Program (MAP) and Foreign Market Development (FMD) program.
